FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Alpena native Thomas Tudor (Danny Thomas) releases new single "Back Up Now"

Out October 30, 2026 on Spotify, Apple Music and all streaming platforms

Thomas Tudor, who records as Danny Thomas. Photo courtesy of the artist; free to use with coverage.

Thomas Tudor grew up in Alpena, where a lot of people know the Tudor family, and now makes music under the name Danny Thomas. He is an alternative pop singer-songwriter based in Nashville, and his new single, "Back Up Now," comes out October 30.

"Back Up Now" is about pushing back on everyone who thinks they know how you should live. The hook says it plainly: "Who the hell are you to tell me what I should be doing every day?"

Tudor writes all of his own lyrics and melodies, and he has spent years working on wind farms and job sites while writing songs about the stuff we don't say out loud. Before going solo he played in the Mountain Home, Arkansas band Words Like Waves.

"Back Up Now" is his sixth single, following "I'm Not Angry" (2026), "That Is What You Do" (2026), "Rock N Roll" (2024), "You Never Asked If I'm OK" (2023) and "In My Head" (2021). He is available for interviews by phone or video call.

Listen & contact

- Website, songs and the story behind each one: https://dannythomasofficial.com
- Spotify: https://open.spotify.com/artist/7GFbeSnK9znsf7JzXYeF0A
- Contact: Thomas Tudor (Danny Thomas), dannythomasofficial@gmail.com